Colonoscopy Information:

A Colonoscopy is a diagnostic procedure that uses a thin flexible tube with a camera and a light to examine the lining of your large intestine (known as the colon) . During the exam, you will be lying on your left side on a stretcher. An intravenous catheter (“IV”) will be placed in a vein in your arm/hand. You will then be hooked up to monitoring equipment to measure your heart rate, blood pressure and oxygen level of your blood. An Anesthesiologist or his/her assistant will administer medicine into your I.V. for sedation (make sure to notify the office of any medication allergies). Once you are asleep and comfortable, the colonoscope will be gently inserted into the rectum and carefully advanced through the colon. If a colonic polyp, an abnormal growth of the colonic tissue is found, your physician may be able to remove the polyp through the instrument. In rare cases, passage of the colonoscope through the entire colon cannot be achieved. The entire examination usually lasts from 20 minutes to one hour.

The BENEFITS of the procedure include the ability to detect and remove colon polyps for colon cancer prevention, evaluate gastrointestinal and abdominal symptoms, obtain biopsies, and identify and treat sites of bleeding. Although a Colonoscopy is a safe procedure, complications can occur. Risks include but are not limited to: Bleeding which can occur after polyp removal or therapy and generally stops on its own but on occasion may require blood transfusion, repeat colonoscopy, hospitalization and/or surgery. Perforation: which is a puncture or tear in the colon wall which may require hospitalization, surgery and may be a serious complication that can even cause death; Reaction to sedation which very rarely some patients develop low blood pressure, irregular heartbeat or difficulty breathing. Missed polyps or lesions which, because the test is not perfect, can occur particularly if they are small in size or flat in shape.
